JIM THORPE - ALL AMERICAN

He did it all. And he did it better than anyone. Oklahoma Indian Jim Thorpe played pro baseball, almost single-handedly put pro football on the map and won Olympic gold medals - yet knew nothing of organized sports before enrolling as a young man at Carlisle School for Indians. When selecting "the greatest athlete of the 20th century," American sportswriters really had only one choice: Jim Thorpe. Burt Lancaster brings dignity, determination and his trademark physicality to this exciting film loaded with thrilling sports action. And he brings dramatic power to his portrayal of Thorpe's greatest triumph: the climb back to a successful life after a bitter slide into obscurity. Also starring Charles Bickford, Steve Cochran and Phyllis Thaxter. Black & White. 105 minutes. Not Rated. (Back in Stock.)

A MAN CALLED HORSE

Richard Harris stars in this carefully documented epic that attempts to realistically portray the life of the American Sioux in the early 19th century. When an English lord is captured by a Sioux Indian tribe, he is given to the chief's aging mother as a servant. Gradually, he embraces the tribe's way of life and falls in love with the chief's sister. But before he can be accepted with honor as an equal member of the tribe, he must endure the Sun Vow - a savage ritual far beyond the realm of anything dreamed of in the civilized world. Also starring Jean Gascon and Manu Tupou. 115 minutes. Close Captioned. Rated R (Back in Stock.)

CHIEFS

This series is the saga of five great First Nation Chiefs - Sitting Bull, Pontiac, Joseph Brant, Black Hawk and Poundmaker. Their stories form a central drama of the history of the North American continent. Their living descendants are the storytellers. By blending documentary and re-enactment, the stories reveal an alternative and essential history of Canada and the United States. Over 4½ hours. Not Rated.

- SITTING BULL

In the years following the American Civil War, a hard-fought Sioux resistance to western expansion, led by warrior and healer Sitting Bull, seemed to have accomplished the impossible: a treaty in which the United States gave the Sioux control of their territory for all time. However, the potential to harvest the riches of the western plains, especially gold, soon proved more important to the nation than honoring the treaty. This two-part episode chronicles the life and legacy of a remarkable native leader that the U.S. government regarded as a stubborn and dangerous obstacle.

- THE TRIAL OF POUNDMAKER

For two days in August of 1885, Plains Cree leader Poundmaker sat shackled in a Regina, Saskatchewan courtroom. He was accused of participating in a rebellion against the Queen's Canadian government. Administrators in the Indian Department, including Sir John A. Macdonald, saw the Cree leader as an agitator and assumed the Cree were in complete collusion with the Louis Riel rebellion.

- THE BLACK HAWK WAR

While an immense statue of Black Hawk overlooks the Mississippi River, near the homeland of Sauk and Fox nations, his descendants were forced to move from their original lands to the Indian territory of Oklahoma. As the Sauk of today relate, the violent conflict that finally erupted around Black Hawk in the spring of 1832 spelled the end of the Sauk resistance to removal and nearly wiped out their people.

- THE WORLD OF JOSEPH BRANT

Joseph Brant was born in 1742 in what is now New York State's Mohawk Valley. His traditional Mohawk name was Thayendanegea, meaning 'two sticks bound together in strength.' This name would be symbolic of Brant's twin ambitions: to be a power broker between Indian and English societies, and to satisfy his thirst for power, recognition and eminence.

- PONTIAC'S REBELLION

Pontiac was a chief of the Ottawa tribe and part of the Algonquin Confederacy centered in North America's Great Lakes. He enjoyed a peaceful and mutually respectful relationship with the French. This harmonious situation changed when the British defeated the French on Quebec's Plains of Abraham in 1759 (The Seven Years War). The British were confident of their supremacy on the frontier, but Pontiac proved them wrong. His remarkably successful rebellion forced the British to reverse their policies and, through the Royal Proclamation of 1763, created a vast Indian sovereign territory.

BUFFY SAINTE-MARIE

From her first record in 1964, Buffy Sainte-Marie had always written songs about everything in a very wide variety of styles. Her albums were extremely diverse and intense from the start. Over the years she has continued to offer a 360-degree insight into her worlds, both simple and complicated. She established the genre, Powwow Rock.

- UP WHERE WE BELONG

This is a collection of the songs that people most often requested at concerts, with a few surprises included as a bonus. Some of the songs were never hits, but a lot of people like them. 15 songs including Cripple Creek, Universal Soldier, Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee, and Now That the Buffalo's Gone.

- THE PATHFINDER

Buried treasures from the mid-70's. To listen now to the recordings made in the mid-1970s offers with the benefit of hindsight a glimpse into this most unusual artist at a time when it had become just about impossible for her to gain airplay. Many of these songs are somewhat unknown to most people. This is an artistic pathfinder who has continually found her way through stereotyping, blacklisting, emerging technologies, and time. This two-disc album presents 33 songs from the mid-70s. Songs include Sweet Little Vera, Eagle Man/Changing Woman, Sweet January, Can't Believe the Feeling, Waves, America My Home, and Ain't No Time for the Worrying Blues.
